

FIRST NATIONS BLUEPRINT 2022–2025

OUR ASPIRATIONS

VISION

This First Nations Blueprint 2022-2025 has been designed to align with Universities Australia's (UA) Indigenous Strategy 2022-2025, which means that UniSQ will:

- work harder to support more Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students to complete degrees and move into positive post-study outcomes
- strengthen pathways for staff career advancement and representation at all levels of UniSQ
- systematically measure UniSQ's efforts to identify both successes and areas where more work is needed
- improve cultural safety and take action on racism against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples by implementing Indigenous-specific anti-racism strategies
- recognise the value Indigenous peoples and knowledges bring to the university and embed Indigenous value systems and knowledges in teaching and research

OUR STRATEGIES

PARTNERSHIPS

Create continuous collaboration with First Nations communities

UniSQ will become a focal point of continuous collaboration with First Nations communities, and with industry, government, and other research institutions by co-designing and co-producing research and learning that leads to positive change in the region.

- 1.1 Lifting engagement across our footprint to support First Nations distinctive cultural, spiritual, physical, and economic relationships with their land and waters
- 1.2 Working with organisations that support Indigenous secondary school students
- 1.3 Strengthening our national and international networks in Indigenous research and teaching
- 1.4 Developing a First Nations Engagement and Marketing Strategy
- 1.5 Designing and implementing an Indigenous Procurement Policy Partnering with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community organisations in Southern Queensland

MISSION

Our Pledge

UniSQ will become renowned as a place of learning and intercultural exchange, truth-telling, and embracing 'Country'. We will empower Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples to take their rightful place and reach their full potential at UniSQ.

OUR PERFORMANCE

Our success will be measured by:

- Proactively use data to drive performance, improvement, and insights in Indigenous higher education. Elevate First Nations-led research, including by working in partnership with communities through co-design and co-production of research.
- Developing a Performance Measurement Matrix for teaching and learning, research, and engagement with First Nations
- Tailoring an online teaching and learning model for First Nations external students
- Designing and delivering micro-credentials that support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander professionals and non-Indigenous people working in First Nations spaces
- Increasing the number of Indigenous students and staff at the University

PEOPLE

Secure and invest in First Nations talent

UniSQ will secure and nurture more First Nations talent, including by investing in talent pipelines. We will increase and retain the number of Indigenous peoples studying, working, teaching, visiting, researching, and collaborating at UniSQ.

- 2.1 Refreshing UniSQ's Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Education Strategy
- 2.2 Reconvening outreach programs such as 'Deadly Ways' in the living with COVID era
- 2.3 Creating new pathways in partnership with TAFE
- 2.4 Working with our First Nations alumni to create opportunities in academia
- 2.5 Adopting a 'grow your own' approach to talent acquisition

PLACES

Provide a First Nations perspective to all

Provide all students with a sense of place from First Nations perspectives. Celebrate First Nations languages, histories, peoples, and cultures on all of our campuses. Embrace 'Country' in delivering curriculum and pedagogical innovation.
