RATIONALE

Children's development and behaviour do not occur in isolation but in response to the context of each situation. The learning environment influences children's ability to benefit from experiences, and their individual background modifies their perception and interpretation of events. These issues are highlighted in the work of Bronfenbrenner on the importance of the range of ecological contexts within which the child develops.

SYNOPSIS

This course will focus on many aspects of early childhood environments in which children find themselves. It will investigate human interactive processes, organisation of space and time and the context of physical environments and the influence of these factors on the planning of appropriate programs within social and cultural contexts.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

- consider the wide range of ecological contexts within which a child develops
- identify and organise important learning areas in early childhood settings
- create learning environments which are responsive to the children's needs, and which consider their social and cultural background
- demonstrate their knowledge of the overall interplay between the way in which play spaces are organised and the effect of interpersonal relationships
- design environments which are safe, aesthetic and responsive.

ASSIGNMENT	100.00	60.00	Y	18 Oct 2002

OTHER REQUIREMENTS

- 1 When there is more than one marker for a single item of assessment, the distribution patterns and means for the different markers will be compared and marks adjusted if necessary.
 - 2 Marking criteria are provided in course material as mark sheets/guides or as part of assignment specifications.
 - 3 Summative assessment items will be given a numerical score.
 - 4 Course Grades will be calculated by aggregating the weighted result or numerical score for each summative assessment item.
 - 5 All assessment items must be submitted and passed overall.
 - 6 If assignments are submitted after the due date without an approved extension of time, University penalties will apply.
