SYNOPSIS

This course will explore the social, economic, political and cultural history of Australia from World War II to the present. Its themes will be the persistence of racial beliefs and their impact on Australia's response to world affairs, Australia's new relations with Britain and the United States, prosperity and its effect on class and gender, the challenge of the social movements of the 1960s, 70s and 80s and the influence of the New Right in the 1990s. There will be further development of critical and interpretative skills through the analysis of primary sources. NOTE: Students who have already passed old unit 95501 will not be permitted to enrol in this course.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will demonstrate:

- a knowledge and understanding of developments in post-war Australian society;
- the ability to distinguish primary and secondary sources and to evaluate them critically;
- the ability to synthesize material from diverse sources and to construct an argument.
- competence in defending particular historical interpretations in both class discussion and assignment work.
