SYNOPSIS

This course provides advanced professional preparation for students in the planning of public relations campaigns. The course builds on theory and practice taught previously in the major. The course allows students to initiate an original campaign through the stages of research, planning, implementation and evaluation. Students are directed to develop a public relations campaign that demonstrates a concerted effort to build socially responsible relationships by achieving research based goals through the application of strategic planning and the measurement of outcomes. Fieldwork is designed to stimulate discussion and lateral thinking of public relations objectives.

OBJECTIVES

The objectives of this course are:

- That students will become familiar with the strengths and weaknesses of key contemporary communication strategies in the context of their applicability to various industrial problems and needs.
- That students will gain field experience in the design, application and evaluation of a project requiring the incorporation of public relations theory and techniques.
- That students will have developed critical skills and a level of professional expertise in an organisational work environment that would be sufficient to justify their employment as public relations consultants.
