REQUISITES

Pre-requisite: Any 3 courses in History

SYNOPSIS

This course emphasises the key events, personalities and ideologies that shaped the world in the twentieth century, and provides the historical context to current events. The recent global past is a notable content area in the Queensland Senior Modern History Syllabus. Knowledge and understanding of this era is obviously crucial for intending secondary teachers, and should be of interest and value to other tertiary students of History. While the focus of the course will be on political and diplomatic events, some attention will also be given to economic, social, and literary developments.

OBJECTIVES

On completion of this course students will have:

1. an informed and critical awareness of definitive historical developments across the world in the twentieth century;
2. a sense of historical continuity and change during this recent period;
3. familiarity with the key events, personalities, and ideologies that shaped the century;
4. further awareness of the nature of historical method and explanation;
5. the capacity to locate and interpret relevant documentary sources;
6. additional experience at the presentation of sustained and documented arguments in spoken and written forms.
