STAFFING

SYNOPSIS

Honours degrees serve to foster a research ethos and provide opportunities for motivated and highly qualified students to undertake advanced study and to produce substantial research dissertations. Students develop the appropriate research skills which allow them to undertake research oriented careers, Masters and/or Doctoral level studies. While the discipline-related courses allow students to gain a thorough understanding of the theoretical framework of particular discipline areas, this course will provide students with the opportunity to undertake independent critical research resulting in the production of a substantial research dissertation. By completing the required research methods course, and by working under the guidance of a supervisor during the course of this course, a student should successfully acquire the appropriate research skills which would allow him/her to undertake research oriented careers, Masters and/or Doctoral level studies.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. identify research topics,
2. undertake independent critical research activity using appropriate methods, statistical techniques and computer applications,
3. report and publish research outcomes.
