RATIONALE

People now expect that their learning will continue well beyond the compulsory sector. Learning futures embraces lifelong and life-wide. Traditional boundaries between secondary and post-compulsory education are becoming increasingly blurred, as the nexus of discrete and parallel pathways from school to life require the educator to be cognisant of learning needs and learning preferences/styles of adolescents, early adults and mature-aged learners. There is also the recognition of the cycle of 'dipping back' into the various learning contexts as workplace and career evolutions become a catalyst for investigating new opportunities and qualifications. Facilitators of lifelong learning should have a clear understanding of the characteristics of learners in past compulsory education and the nature of learning processes utilised by them. Such knowledge underpins an individual's capabilities to respond positively to dynamic learning futures.

SYNOPSIS

Within a framework of theories adult learning, participants in this course will explore and examine contemporary concepts of lifelong and life-wide. Underpinning these characteristics and imperatives for learning futures lies a diversity of cultural, social and philosophical experiences and expectations. Students will explore issues of multiliteracies, cultural diversity/cultural convergence, inclusivity and how these impact in pluralist learning environments. This course facilitates students' understandings of how these theories and issues impact on curriculum, instructional strategies, assessment and evaluation. NOTES: 1. This course (FET5602) is available through INTERNET DELIVERY ONLY. There are NO print materials for this course. 2. For details of the technical requirements and accessing Internet study materials, please consult the following URL: <http://usqconnect.usq.edu.au>. IMPORTANT NOTE: Working with Children: State law in Queensland requires that all adults (including university students, pre-service educators, trainers, vocational teachers, industry educators) working with children under the age of 18, in the state of Queensland*, obtain approval before commencing such work. Many education courses include a practical component (professional experience, project work, research, assessment etc..) that may require engagement with children under the age of 18. It is your responsibility to ensure that you possess a current suitability card (Blue Card) before commencing any practical components of this course. DO NOT PARTICIPATE IN ANY PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE WITH CHILDREN UNDER 18 UNLESS YOU POSSESS A CURRENT 'BLUE CARD'. For further information:
