SYNOPSIS

This course is designed to acquaint students with the legal issues involved in the protection of the environment. This is to be achieved through exposure to the sources of Australian environmental regulation: international, national and state. While there is no set prerequisite legal study required, it is recommended that students have completed Introduction to Law LAW1101 or Technology and Society ENG2002. The course examines the various sources of environmental law demonstrating how international initiatives are translated into domestic regulation. Through this mechanism students are exposed to some of the difficulties in this area of the law such as definitional difficulties as well as the incorporation of concepts such as ecologically sustainable development, intergenerational equity and the precautionary principle into regulation. This is achieved by an examination of the Australian and Queensland environmental regulatory framework. Such practical issues as increasing Commonwealth involvement in environmental matters, the regulation of environmentally relevant activities and land use planning are dealt with.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. describe, interpret and explain the principles and mechanisms of international environmental law and the manner in which international environmental law deals with specified topics;
2. describe, interpret and explain the Australian Federal environmental law regime;
3. describe, interpret and explain the role of the common law in environmental regulation;
4. describe, interpret and explain issues in the use and regulation of genetically modified organisms;
5. describe, interpret and explain corporate liability in environmental protection;
6. describe, interpret and explain regulation of environmentally relevant activities in Queensland;
7. describe, interpret and explain land use planning in Queensland;

8. describe, interpret and explain issues in environmental compliance and dispute resolution;
9. demonstrate the process of applying environmental legal principles to factual situations;
10. compare, contrast and evaluate the international, national and State environmental legal systems;
