RATIONALE

This course is designed to introduce students to both traditional and non-traditional means of resolving disputes in a legal context. It provides a framework of relevant Australian legal principles and processes and relates these to the role of a professional adviser. Obligations of professionals in the realm of dispute resolution are considered, whether before the courts in civil proceedings as a litigant or a witness, or involved in mediation and alternative dispute resolution processes. The role of administrative law and its impact on decision making is investigated with particular regard to the legal principles and processes concerning an adviser appearing before the Administrative Appeals Tribunal. Outcomes in the form of available legal remedies and costs are considered. Developments in alternative dispute resolution methods and their application and impact on professional advisors is investigated.

SYNOPSIS

Within the litigation sphere, the course covers matters such as jurisdiction, procedure, evidentiary rules and remedies in relation to courts and tribunals. (It also examines administrative law when dealing with tribunals). In the non-traditional area, students are introduced to developments in alternative dispute resolution, including negotiation, mediation and arbitration.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. describe, interpret, illustrate and explain: (a) the Australian Legal system, the role and application of precedent, court hierarchy and jurisdictions; (b) civil procedure, both at trial and in interlocutory proceedings (for example discovery, subpoenas, privilege, and investigatory powers of government agencies); (c) rules of evidence, for example,

- onus of proof, admissibility, hearsay and the role of expert witnesses; (d) important tribunals, their jurisdiction and relevant rules of procedure and evidence; (e) principles of administrative law applicable to tribunal activities (particularly the Administrative Appeals Tribunal as it deals with taxation matters); (f) remedies available in given causes of action and proceedings and the principles underlying the awarding of costs; (g) developments in alternative dispute resolution and evaluate and critique their usefulness in given scenarios;
2. demonstrate through appropriate illustrations the principles of law dealt with in this course and an ability to apply those principles in factual scenarios; and
