RATIONALE

This course focuses on the interdependent relationship between theory and practice as it informs theatre practitioners.

SYNOPSIS

This course focuses on the interdependent relationship between theory and practice as it informs theatre practitioners. Models of specific theatre methodologies will form the basis of exploration. Students will be encouraged to participate in small group activities in order to replicate and explore these models. The models will be experienced from the perspectives of director, dramaturg, performer, scripter, audience, etc. The course will culminate in small group work-in-progress presentations to either an in-house or appropriate public audience. Students will also explore collaborative models, theatre for youth models and playbuilding theories in preparation for QUE Fest (TP2).
