RATIONALE

Professionals involved in post compulsory contexts are subject to the effects of significant, dynamic, and continual reform. One of the impacts of this reform agenda is an increased need for the construction, implementation and management of learner-centred and client-centred approaches. This impact is compounded through the diverse range of individuals and communities who undertake post compulsory studies. Increasingly these professionals find themselves accountable to the social parameters and aspirations of the local and global community. In such milieu, the performance, interactions and relationships of education and training professionals need to be in concert with contemporary community values. Such values include equity and access, inclusivity, and cultural sensitivity. This course aims at building the capacity of post compulsory educators in responding to these contemporary and emerging demands.

SYNOPSIS

This course emerges from a platform of enquiry into productive and sustainable teaching and learning practices in relation to contemporary post-compulsory education and training contexts. Through this platform of exploration, it requires participants to inspect and review their teaching and learning context in relation to current legislation and principles of fairness and equity. The course will introduce and explore notions of culture, ethnicity, difference, disabilities and tolerance. The notion of multiculturalism/pluralism will be explored further, particularly in terms of implications for educational planning and delivery. Practical approaches to responding to 'difference' in the learning environment will be explored. This course aims at building the capacity of post compulsory educators in establishing connections between social and educational theory and policy to the end of expressing acceptable and sound practice within their educational and community roles. IMPORTANT NOTE: Working with Children: State law in Queensland requires that all adults (including university students, pre-service educators, trainers, vocational teachers, industry educators) working with children under the age of 18, in the State of Queensland*, obtain approval before commencing such work.
