RATIONALE

Educators' knowledge of the development of multiple literacies from birth to five years of age provides the framework for planning supportive literacy environments that facilitate the important transition from infancy through to the early years of school. Educators' awareness of the influence of socio-cultural contexts and the significance of continuity between the educational environments of the home and centre/school provides a focus for appreciating children's purposes in communicating and their search for meanings as they develop effective use of language.

SYNOPSIS

This course will explore how the development of oral language and the early symbolic representation of young children form the basis of literacy learning. The course will examine how emerging literacies are influenced by experiences with speaking, listening, viewing and symbolic representation in the social contexts of home and prior-to-school settings. This course will focus on the importance of oral language experiences, story in its many forms, the use of stimulating resources and careful planning of environments in engaging young children in authentic literacy. Value will be placed on appreciating the role of children's home and social experiences in their early literacy development. This course expects correct and appropriate use of language and literacy among participants. Students will need access to children aged 2-5 years. Students will need to commit themselves to weekly assignment completion.
