RATIONALE

As students move towards undergraduate studies there is a need to induct them into the university culture of learning. An understanding of the written and spoken conventions of academic communication is an important part of this preparation. Students can apply this understanding of academic communication to other discipline-based courses being studied concurrently in the program.

SYNOPSIS

In this course, language concepts and skills are developed to establish the fundamentals of academic English and to support the courses being studied concurrently in the student's chosen stream. The course aims to improve the academic English skills of reading, writing, listening and speaking. As well, a range of study and organizational skills required for independent learning is an integrated feature of this course.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students should be able to perform the following tasks in English:

1. participate interactively with fellow students to complete group tasks; (Assignment 3)
2. identify the features and purpose of academic text types, and apply this knowledge to comprehension, note-making and presentation tasks; (Listening Test, Assignment 1 & 2, Final Test)
3. apply suitable language choices to develop accurate, clear and varied expression and style in academic communication; (Assignment 1, Current Affairs Reports, Final Test)
4. analyse the specific demands of tasks typical of courses being studied, and plan and undertake relevant resource selection to respond to these tasks; (Workbooks 1, 2 & 3)

5. demonstrate organizational and study skills including self- evaluation and goal setting.
(Workbooks 1, 2 & 3)
