RATIONALE

Nurses fulfil their professional role in a health care system which is heavily influenced, by sociological factors. These factors have a direct impact on the way in which Nursing is perceived and utilised within the system, as well as the way in which nurses perceive themselves, and their role. Nurses must identify the forces which historically have shaped the profession of nursing in order to accurately assess and discuss the issues which confront nurses today. These include industrial and professional nursing issues, current paradigms and theories within nursing, images of nursing, ethico-legal issues, gender issues, and socio-political and economic issues.

SYNOPSIS

This course introduces the student to the position of Nursing in the Health Care System. Perspectives to be explored will include social, political, organisational and legal/ethical factors. Professional issues will be examined and the politics of health will be discussed.

OBJECTIVES

On completion of the course students will be able to:

1. identify and debate contemporary issues in nursing (Assignment 2);
2. describe the role of Professional and Industrial nursing organisations (Assignment 2);
3. discuss the attributes of professional practice as they relate to Nursing and the individual nurse (Assignments 1 and 2);
4. describe the position of nursing within the health care system (Assignment 2);
5. relate relevant legal principles to specific nursing and related health care venues and situations (Assignment 1);

6. consider ethical principles which will form the basis for ethical reasoning in nursing practice (Assignment 1);
7. identify the basic structure and function of a Health Care System (Assignment 2);
8. consider alternative political ideological perspectives on health care delivery (Assignment 2).
