RATIONALE

There is considerable debate and apprehension about the impact of industrialisation on the environment and about whether or not present levels of consumption (both in the developed and underdeveloped world) can be sustained for much longer. This debate extends from those who claim that the environmentalists are alarmists and wrong, through those in the middle who remain unconvinced one way or another, or who don't care, or whose position is to have no position, or those who have adopted a wait and see attitude, to those who believe that it is already too late to divert major dislocations. This subject aims to allow managers to acquaint themselves with normative positions taken and to examine the scientific evidence put forward in support of these positions.

SYNOPSIS

This subject investigates major phenomena perceived to be threatening planet earth's environment and consequently the progress of industrialisation and the standard of living in both rich and poor countries alike. Topics may include: global warming and CO<sub>2</sub>, acid rain and SO<sub>2</sub> ozone depletion, loss of biological diversity. It also introduces other topics: air, noise and water pollution, land degradation, and ocean management. Formerly MGT8011.

OBJECTIVES

The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item/s that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective is/are shown in parentheses after each objective. On successful completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. be aware of major phenomena which impact on the environment and the conduct of business (Assignment 1, Assignment 2, Assignment 3)
2. form opinions about the scientific evidence associated with those phenomena (Assignment 1, Assignment 2, Assignment 3)
3. understand the nature of countervailing strategies required to combat those phenomena and the legal and commercial imperatives driving these (Assignment 1, Assignment 2, Assignment 3)
4. develop a basic knowledge of air, noise and water pollution, land degradation and destruction of the oceans (Assignment 1, Assignment 2, Assignment 3)
5. acquire a working knowledge of the environmental industry that is developing in response to perceptions about these phenomena (Assignment 1, Assignment 2, Assignment 3).
