SYNOPSIS

The field of supply chain management has arisen as firms try to become more efficient. Integrating the functions of purchasing, manufacturing and distribution is becoming recognised as a core competitive strategy. This goes beyond the concept of integrated logistics, and involves all the functions within an organisation. This course will introduce the thinking and concepts involved in the evolution of supply chain management, and consider impact of such developments on an organisation, in terms of both functional and performance aspects.

OBJECTIVES

The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item/s that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective is/are shown in parentheses after each objective. On successful completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. identify the strategic imperatives promoting the development of supply chain management, and discuss the types of organisations where it is appropriate; identify the information system needs of supply chain management, and discuss how they can be met (Assignment, Major Report, Examination)
2. relate the techniques of logistics and inventory management to their role in the supply chain (Assignment, Major Report, Examination)
3. identify and discuss the need for, and features of, relationships within the supply chain (Assignment, Major Report, Examination)
4. apply benchmarking techniques and business process reengineering to assist in achieving best-class practice (Assignment, Major Report, Examination).
