RATIONALE

This course aims to inform graduate students of the nature of marketing as seen from a management perspective in the context of today's rapidly changing environment. The course will stress an empirical approach, questioning the existing theory and providing new insights into the marketing process through critical reading and research. Once students have mastered the basics, they will be expected to use this information in problem-solving via a case study approach, both simulated and real-world. The essential roles of planning, implementation and control will be stressed, and there will also be an emphasis on marketing strategy in response to rapid environmental change. This course is part of the core of the MBA program as well as serving as the prerequisite for each of the four courses which comprise the postgraduate coursework specialisations in Marketing.

SYNOPSIS

The course highlights the need for managers to view the role of marketing as a vital managerial concern. The importance of a marketing perspective will be examined through the use of case studies in both domestic and international environments on the basis of empirical evidence. At the completion of the course students will be able to analyse the changing marketing environment, engage in creative market-oriented thinking, and be aware of the interplay between marketing and the other managerial functions of a firm. The crucial role of marketing in contributing to the success of organisations is emphasised.

OBJECTIVES

The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item/s that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective is/are shown in parentheses after each objective. On successful completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. know that marketing starts and ends with customers and consumers (Case Study, Examination)
2. appreciate the responsibilities of marketers in our society (Essay, Examination)
3. understand the importance of market research in the marketing process (Case Study, Examination)
4. appreciate the role of marketing in business (Case Study, Examination)
5. analyse and evaluate marketing opportunities (Case Study, Examination)
6. critically evaluate marketing issues and the marketing literature (Essay)
7. use written communication skills to persuade a target audience (Essay, Case Study, Examination)
8. use a range of sources including electronic data bases (Essay, Case Study)
9. demonstrate an ability to guide companies to develop innovative solutions to solve marketing problems (Case Study, Examination).
