RATIONALE

Contemporary nursing practice is situated within a variety of health care settings and it is therefore important to familiarize students with a breadth of clinical experiences which reflect such diversity. Importantly this course will give students the opportunity to practice and evaluate care for individuals, families and populations within diverse community settings. The ANMC Competencies are a national regulatory framework to assist nurses to deliver safe and competent care. This course addresses the ANMC Competencies applied in community practice and uses them as a framework to assess clinical skills. It is expected that student experiences in community settings will familiarize them with a variety of health care models. Students will be able to observe and critically appraise the nurse's role in delivering primary, secondary or tertiary care within the community. This course allows for a scaffolding of experiential skills and application of knowledge and students will be expected to integrate pre and co-requisite course theory and practice, such as (NUR2400: Models of Nursing Care, NUR2500: Nursing Older People, and NUR3030: Indigenous and Cross Cultural Care), to augment clinical knowledge and experience in this course.

SYNOPSIS

It is anticipated that students will complete 160 hours of clinical practice and 8 hours of briefing and debriefing in a setting or settings other than a metropolitan acute care hospital. Student placements may include rural and remote hospitals or health care centres, community health settings, domiciliary practice, Indigenous communities and health centres, correctional centres, schools, drug rehabilitation centres and aged care facilities. Students will have the opportunity to explore strategies used within the community setting, incorporating concepts of primary and /or secondary and/or tertiary health care principles to the individual and/or groups within a particular community. This course continues to build on the students skills in and understanding of reflective nursing practice, critical thinking, professional ethics, cultural safety, safety/environmental responsibility and evidence based nursing practice. The course will augment knowledge and skills gained in *previous and concurrent theoretical courses. * NUR2400: Models of Nursing Care, NUR2500: Nursing Older People, and NUR3030: Indigenous and Cross Cultural Care
