RATIONALE

Nursing is a practice profession and as such the inclusion of a sequence of professional clinical experience is fundamental to ensure that the graduand is a safe and competent beginning practitioner. Contemporary nursing requires a sound foundation of theoretical principles applied to the clinical environment. This clinical course consolidates the knowledge and skills that students have gathered throughout the Bachelor of Nursing (Pre-registration) Program and applies these foundations into clinical practice, using a preceptor/mentor model of supervision.

SYNOPSIS

This clinical course allows for a final review and refinement of experiential skills and application of theoretical knowledge prior to entering the profession as a novice Registered Nurse. This course focuses on the performance required for safe and competent practice as a Registered Nurse. Students are placed in structured situations which will facilitate accomplishment of pre-determined clinical objectives to demonstrate competency in holistic, culturally appropriate and effective care to ensure transition as a novice Registered Nurse. This course builds on an understanding of professional ethics, safety/ environmental responsibilities, and direct patient care from prior or concurrent theoretical learning courses to develop critical thinking and analysis through evidence-based practice. This course facilitates practice in the establishment, maintenance and conclusion of therapeutic relationships, and the conduct of comprehensive and systematic nursing assessment, care planning and appropriate interventions. It enables students to further explore the quality improvement processes within healthcare. The student's performance is evaluated using a clinical tool which directly assesses the competencies set by the Australian Nursing and Midwifery Council.

OBJECTIVES

On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. conduct clinical practice which can be professionally and ethically justified, and in compliance with legislation and common law; (ANMC Competency 1,2 and 10), (Clinical Evaluation Tool, Interim Clinical Report and Case Study)
