RATIONALE

It is vital that educational researchers understand and engage with the ethical and political dimensions and effects of the research paradigms, methods and techniques that they deploy to address their research hypotheses or questions. Researchers need also to comprehend and evaluate approaches to data management in educational research as a foundation for ensuring that their own data collection and analysis approaches are as effective, efficient and equitable as possible. This course provides students with the opportunity to apply critical understandings of principles and strategies gleaned from published research to provide a substantial foundation for their own effective and ethical practices as contemporary educational researchers.

SYNOPSIS

This course provides an overview of selected contemporary issues related to the ethics and politics of educational research, and to the appropriate management of data in educational research projects. Topics include: anonymity and confidentiality; informed consent; gatekeepers and stakeholders; overt and covert research; recording and representing participants' voices; situated ethics; research benefits and interests; ethical implications of and for research designs; primary and secondary data; data collection techniques; data analysis techniques; sampling and selecting participants; reliability, validity, credibility and trustworthiness; drawing inferences and reaching conclusions.

OBJECTIVES

The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item(s) that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective are shown in parenthesis. On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. identify the theoretically framed ethical and political dimensions and effects of educational research (Ethical Clearance Application and Commentary)

2. engage with the approaches to educational research ethics and politics by researchers working with specific research paradigms, methods and techniques (Ethical Clearance Application and Commentary)
3. demonstrate the skills required to prepare an appropriate and effective ethical clearance application (Ethical Clearance Application and Commentary)
4. articulate the conceptually framed key components of the efficient collection and management of research data (Data Collection and Analysis Critical Commentary)
5. communicate the principal elements of the effective analysis and reporting of research data (Data Collection and Analysis Critical Commentary)
6. demonstrate the skills required to interrogate a published educational researcher's approach to data collection and analysis (Data Collection and Analysis Critical Commentary)
7. demonstrate competence in the use of scholarly language and literacy appropriate to the doctoral level (Ethical Clearance Application and Commentary/Data Collection and Analysis Critical Commentary).
