SYNOPSIS

The final decades of the eighteenth century and the early decades of the nineteenth century were a time not only of radical changes in politics, literature, art, ideas and everyday life, but also a conservative reaction to those changes. This course examines British literature of the period in its social contexts, focusing on the relationships between literary form and ideology in the novel, and the paradoxical claims for romantic poetry as a product of individual genius that would legislate for society in a time of change.

OBJECTIVES

On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. demonstrate cultural literacy through description of the way cultural and historical contexts contribute to literary creativity;
2. communicate in writing by preparing and submitting an assignment and essays;
3. demonstrate academic and professional literacy skills by comprehending and critically analysing disciplinary texts;
4. demonstrate ethical research and enquiry skills by adhering to principles of academic integrity;
5. successfully adopt creative skills and processes in developing new approaches to long standing critical issues.
