RATIONALE

Socio-cultural and socio-political factors are powerful influences on the environments in which educators conduct their work in educational sites and, in turn, on the environments that they establish for their work with learners. In the broader context of globalisation, with its attendant homogenising forces, inclusive practice needs to recognise the differences that learners and communities bring to the learning context. In order to design educational environments that are socially just and inclusive, educators require an understanding of the socio-cultural realities of learners and the positioning of educational sites within particular cultural contexts and locations.

SYNOPSIS

This course is designed to assist students to understand the range of social and political forces that interact to shape the nature of educational contexts and environments within educational sites, as well as the cultural identities of the individuals within those sites. Understanding of these forces and trends is connected to exploration of whole-site and individual-educator approaches to the establishment of inclusive learning environments. Awareness of how particular sites respond to particular features of their socio-cultural communities is explored through the lens of a social justice approach to meet the needs of diverse groups in contemporary education and community locations. NOTE: Minimum enrolment numbers apply to this offering. Should enrolments not reach the minimum number required for on-campus study, students may be transferred to the EXT or WEB offering and advised of this change before semester commences.
