SYNOPSIS

Criminal law sets the limits which society, through the government, imposes on acceptable behaviour. The limits are set to provide the basis of a safe environment in which people can lead productive lives. Going beyond those limits can result in drastic consequences for the individual within the criminal law regime. This course will introduce students to the fundamental principles that underlie criminal law in Queensland. It will also introduce students to criminal procedure, with a focus on Queensland Magistrate and District Court trials; a selected range of criminal law offences and defences, and general principles of sentencing in Queensland. The course is designed to take students on the journey through the criminal process from arrest through to appeal, with a focus on some processes and offences likely to be encountered by commencing criminal law practitioners. Criminal law B will build upon the foundations laid in this course.

OBJECTIVES

The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item/s that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective is/are shown in parentheses after each objective. On successful completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. understand the classification of criminal offences and its relevance to other criminal processes, for example, arrest and court jurisdiction (Assignment, Examination)

2. understand the nature of the Criminal Code (Qld) (Assignment, Examination)
3. understand the role, and ethical considerations relevant to that role, of criminal law practitioners (Examination)
4. deconstruct and understand selected Criminal Code (Qld) and other statutory criminal offences, defences and excuses (Assignment, Examination)
5. understand the relationship between criminal offences and case law, and the role of the judge and jury (Assignment, Examination)
6. understand criminal processes and general sentencing principles in Queensland (Assignment, Examination)
7. apply, using appropriate problem solving methodologies, the criminal law to problems on selected offences in order to determine the likely outcome to issues (Examination)
8. demonstrate satisfactory written communication skills (Assignment, Examination)
9. apply methods of legal citation and referencing (Assignment, Examination)
10. locate, through research, and analyse primary law and secondary materials, relevant to topics considered in this course (Assignment).
