RATIONALE

Fundamental to nursing practice is an understanding of how health and illness can be conceptualised and what factors determine health at an individual, community and population level. Providing holistic care is also dependent on the nurse developing an understanding of how an individuals' health or experience of ill health may be influenced by developmental life stages. To meet changing health care demands, nurses need to have an understanding of how different models and frameworks used to respond to health priorities are used within the context of the Australian Health Care System.

SYNOPSIS

Students will be able to describe how health, illness and wellness can be conceptualised and how these concepts can be applied in terms of contemporary health models, theories and frameworks. Students will be able to identify a range of determinants which may impact on health and behaviour including social / psychological/ biological/ and environmental. In addition students will also begin to develop knowledge of how social influences, health beliefs and human developmental stages and changes can also impact on an individual's experience of health or ill health. Students will also begin to develop knowledge of a nurse's role in preventing illness and promoting health and apply this at an individual and community / population level. Students will be able to identify significant major health issues in Australia including indigenous, rural health and lifespan issues. Students in this course will develop critical thinking skills by exploring how a determinants approach can be incorporated into their nursing practice.

OBJECTIVES

On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. Describe how health and illness can be conceptualised (including lay perspectives, models, frameworks and theories of health, wellbeing and illness) (Assignment, Group Presentation, Exam)

2. Identify and describe significant health issues in Australia (Group Oral Presentation, Exam)
3. Compare and contrast determinants of health between specific populations e.g. Indigenous and non-Indigenous populations, urban Vs rural (Group Oral Presentation; Exam)
4. Locate and retrieve appropriate literature from a variety of sources to examine a significant health issue; (Group Presentation)
5. Apply knowledge of human developmental stages, changes and events for people experiencing ill health and also in promoting health across the lifespan (Exam)
6. Describe the variables which may influence an individual's behaviour and how this may affect an individual and their family (Exam)
