RATIONALE

The health of the body and the body politic is a crucial concern in contemporary societies. Personal, physical, social, economic, political and environmental health issues confront citizens continuously and the importance of the role education plays in developing and implementing strategies for the development of healthy communities cannot be overstated. The interconnectedness of these various dimensions of health means that integrated approaches to understanding the issues and developing pedagogical responses to them must also be integrated. The formal curriculum areas of Health and Physical Education (HPE) and Studies of Society and Environment (SOSE) are the two most obvious vehicles for addressing these matters in schools.

SYNOPSIS

This course will require students to build on understandings of current curriculum statements in the areas of HPE and SOSE in coming to understand and promote the role of teachers as major contributors to the development of healthy communities. Theoretical issues to be addressed in this course are: notions of health; the concepts of community, governmentality, and interdependence; and transformative pedagogy. The course will require students to demonstrate professional competence in planning and teaching for personal, social and environmental health. Successful completion of a related professional experience program and a practical games and aquatics module is required. The use of computer-based simulation software in teaching about communities is also a feature of this course. Explorations of healthy environments will also draw on inputs and insights from environmental science derived from both (so-called) Western and alternative sciences, including indigenous sciences. Students in this course will participate in an associated professional experience of 10 days during which they will be encouraged to apply their learning from the course and from which they should be able to bring fresh insights to the course work.

OBJECTIVES

The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item(s) that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective are shown in parenthesis. On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. articulate an understanding of the connections between education, health and community across a number of dimensions (Assignments 1 and 2)
2. plan, develop and implement teaching sequences aimed at contributing to the development of healthy communities (Assignments 1 and 2)
3. develop a capacity to plan, develop and teach swimming skills and practical games (Practical Assessment)
4. apply productive pedagogies and rich task orientation across a number of formal curriculum areas, particularly the HPE and SOSE areas (Assignment 2)
5. demonstrate knowledge and skill in planning, teaching, assessing and managing experiences in school settings at levels appropriate to this courses placement in the sequence of professional experiences courses in the program (Professional Experience)
6. demonstrate a capacity to plan purposeful learning experience to enhance the health of selected students and communities (Assignments 1 and 2).
7. demonstrate competence in and appropriate use of language and literacy, including spelling, grammar, punctuation and bibliographic referencing. (Assignments 1 and 2)
