REQUISITES

SYNOPSIS

A major ingredient in the Renaissance was the rediscovery of the philosophy, political theory, and artistic achievements of Athens in the fifth and fourth centuries B.C. An examination of the extant tragedies and comedies of the fifth century in comparison with relevant Renaissance playtexts provides an understanding of how the theatre served and shaped its original society and how it has continued to serve and shape, in a variety of forms, post- Renaissance societies. Enrolment is restricted to Honours students.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. demonstrate an advanced understanding of the cultural, religious and dramatic import of the extant tragedies and comedies;
2. appreciate cultural re-interpretations of Hellenic models;
3. evaluate theatrically diverse performances of the Hellenic texts.
