RATIONALE

Workplace-based learning programs are designed to enable students to draw upon their work and life experiences to demonstrate their achievement of many required attributes and capabilities. This course must be taken during the first or second semester of a program in workplace-based learning. It will enable students to consider their individual program objectives including those concerned with improvements within their field of employment by the development of an individualized Learning Plan informed by the completed Learning Portfolio from course WBL8000.

SYNOPSIS

This course will enable the student to identify their program objectives and will focus on the development of a Learning Plan, based on their Learning Portfolio, which will outline the complementary studies and workplace-based project(s) to be taken in order to fulfill these objectives. Discussion within the workplace will help to ascertain the time available to undertake the workplace-based project(s) within normal working time. The workplace-based project(s) will be outlined, an appropriate unit size for each project will be determined and methods of demonstrating contextualized learning experiences and augmented expertise will be identified. Students will also show how the project(s) may benefit the workplace. They will also show how they will explore and communicate the relevance of literature related to specific fields of interest. It is expected that there will be considerable negotiation between the student and the USQ Adviser to ensure that the Learning Plan will clearly outline a cohesive, relevant learning pathway.

OBJECTIVES

On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. Identify the student's program learning objectives
2. Outline a workplace-based project or projects that may be of benefit to the workplace

4. Contextualise the development of learning experiences and expertise with regard to professional standards and expectations
5. Explore and communicate the relevance of literature to specific fields of interest
