Major studies

Students taking the Bachelor of Music degree specialise in Music. These core music studies include music history, performance, music craft, and music project units. Students choose concerto performance, studio teaching, genre studies, chamber music, accompanying or languages (for singers) as electives within the major in the second and third years of the program.

Most courses are available in the on-campus and external modes. The only exceptions are certain music elective courses. Performance and studio teaching courses available externally are restricted by instrument and location.

Minor studies

All Bachelor of Music students should take one of the music elective suites of courses unless they are contemplating secondary school teaching or other careers, in which case they will be able to take approved minor studies from the list found in the Option studies part of this Handbook.
