Program focus

The Master of Arts (English Studies) has been designed to accommodate the needs of practising secondary school teachers seeking career development opportunities as required by the Queensland Department of Education, as well as students seeking a pathway to the PhD program and anyone interested in pursuing a love of English Literature. The eight unit degree is designed for students seeking to extend their knowledge of English literature and the range of methodologies historically and currently applied in the field.

Program aims

The Master of Arts (English Studies) has been designed to accommodate the needs of practising secondary school teachers seeking career development opportunities as required by the Queensland Department of Education. The eight unit degree is designed for students seeking to extend their knowledge of English studies and the range of methodologies historically and currently applied in the field. It will provide an alternative to the MEd for those students specifically seeking to enhance their knowledge of discipline content. In particular, the program has been designed to enhance students' knowledge of theoretical approaches and applied content that will be required in the new school English Studies curriculum. It extends a percentage of the content of the curriculum into the area of cultural studies, media studies, popular cultural forms and comparisons between canonical and popular forms.

Program objectives

The Master of Arts (English Studies) aims to:

- provide in-depth study of defined areas of English studies
- facilitate the development and consolidation of a body of specialist knowledge and competencies in the field of English studies with specific reference to the changing definitions of the senior secondary schools curriculum
- develop in students an understanding and awareness of scholarly literature and research in English studies
- extend the knowledge base and critical approaches in ways that are useful to practising secondary school English teachers
- encourage and develop skills and knowledge related to independent inquiry and/or research in order to produce reports to a professionally or academically knowledgeable audience.
