USQ Health and Wellbeing Strategy
2016–2020
From the Vice-Chancellor

The University community has diverse health and wellbeing needs and it is important that we develop a culture that considers these diverse needs in order to treat all staff, students, and the community with equity, fairness and respect.

A healthy work and learning environment is essential to the prosperity of the USQ community. I am dedicated to ensuring that the frameworks, programs, supports and services are in place to support positive health and wellbeing and the USQ Health and Wellbeing Strategy 2016 – 2020 consolidates this commitment.

I encourage you to participate in programs, and to seek information about the services and support available, whether on-campus or online.

Your capacity and willingness to support and promote positive health and wellbeing in our work and learning environments is something that will inspire and nurture others.
1. Objectives

The University of Southern Queensland is committed to creating a healthy work and learning environment for its employees, students and the broader University community. In creating this healthy work and learning environment, the University recognises the importance of ensuring that all employees and students are able to work and learn in a supportive, professional and caring environment where all individuals are valued and respected.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) defines health as:

‘a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.’

Mental Health is as fundamental to an individual’s quality of life as physical health and positive mental health is defined by the World Health Organisation as the:

‘foundation for wellbeing and effective functioning for both the individual and the community’ and is defined as a state ‘which allows individuals to realise their abilities, cope with the normal stresses of life, work productively and fruitfully, and make a contribution to their community.’

‘The capacity for mutually satisfying and enduring relationships is another important aspect of positive mental health’. (WHO 2001)

The USQ Health and Wellbeing Strategy recognises the World Health Organisation’s definitions of health and positive mental health and aims to provides the framework to support USQ’s commitment to provide a coordinated, holistic approach to employee and student wellbeing. It also recognises the World Health Organisation Healthy Workplace Framework which aims to support individuals to improve and maintain their health and wellbeing through increased health knowledge and skills, promotion and encouragement of involvement in health initiatives and the provision of a range of health resources.
2. Health and Wellbeing Framework

This strategy is based on the USQ Health and Wellbeing Framework, which aims to create a healthy work and learning environment. This will, in turn, improve the workplace culture and morale within the University community and result in positive benefits for employees, students, the organisation and the broader USQ community. These positive benefits include improved health awareness and knowledge, improved physical and psychological health and productivity improvements. The strategy acknowledges the important role that USQ, employees and students have to play in ensuring the University’s organisational culture acknowledges supports and promotes positive and sustainable health and wellbeing. The strategy also acknowledges that the University community has diverse health needs in respect of age, gender, ability and culture. The strategy will consider these diverse needs in order to treat all staff, students and the community with equity, fairness and respect.

This strategy focuses on promoting positive wellbeing from a multidimensional perspective and includes seven elements of positive wellbeing at USQ. These focus areas are as follows:

- professional wellbeing which recognises personal satisfaction and enrichment in one’s life through work and study
- physical wellbeing which recognises the need to maintain a healthy quality of life through an individual’s day-to-day activities including regular exercise, good nutrition and healthy lifestyle choices
- emotional wellbeing which recognises the awareness and understanding of individual feelings and emotions
- social wellbeing which recognises the importance of creating and maintaining quality relationships
- cultural wellbeing which recognises the need for individuals to participate in creative and cultural activities and to retain, interpret and express their history, heritage and traditions
- psychological wellbeing which acknowledges the need for individuals to manage the demands of daily life that are within their control
- organisational wellbeing which recognises the influence of policy, regulatory and governance factors on an individual’s ability to perform positive health behaviours.
The University’s desire to create a healthy work and learning environment will be achieved through the following three areas of activity:

- promotion and awareness – increasing promotion and awareness of positive wellbeing
- early response – preventing and minimising the impact of illness or injury and providing early intervention mechanisms for those who, regardless of proactive strategies, still require support
- monitoring and prevention – developing mechanisms and processes to monitor and prevent illness and injury through reducing risk and enhancing protective factors.

The University recognises its obligations under the Work Health and Safety Act 2011, the Fair Work Act 2009 and associated legislation. Further, this strategy has been developed taking into consideration a range of existing USQ health services, programs and initiatives, as well as University policy and procedures including, but not limited to:

- Employee Code of Conduct
- Employee Equity and Diversity Policy
- Prevention of Discrimination, Bullying and Harassment Procedure
- Employee Complaints and Grievances Policy
- Discrimination, Bullying and Harassment Complaints against Employees Procedure
- Discrimination and Harassment Complaint Resolution Schedule
- Employee Workplace Bullying and Harassment Complaint Resolution Schedule
- Student Advice, Student Welfare and Pastoral Support Policy and Procedure
- Students with a Disability Policy and Procedure
- Equity in Education Policy and Procedure
- Prevention of Workplace Violence Policy and Procedures.

The Strategy also acknowledges that the University is required to provide employees and students with a safe and healthy work and learning environment. This includes the obligation to provide a workplace and learning environment that is free from harassment, bullying and discrimination and that reflects the cultural and geographically diverse nature of USQ and its employees and students.
3. Governance

The Vice-Chancellor, as chair of the Vice-Chancellor’s Committee, acts as the clear senior advocate for strategies that support and promote employee and student health and wellbeing at the University.

The Vice-Chancellor’s Committee, as the key advisory Committee to the Vice-Chancellor on all matters relating to the management of the University and on the setting of strategic directions and the development of policy, has overall responsibility for the implementation, administration and monitoring of this Strategy. Deputy Vice-Chancellors, Directors and Executive Deans also have an influential role in the execution and monitoring of the Strategy.

The USQ Health and Wellbeing Network will be established to provide a mechanism for employees and students to actively participate and contribute to the expansion of existing health and wellbeing services and programs and to the development of new and innovative initiatives to improve the health and wellbeing of USQ employees and students. The Network would consist of students and employees to act as key stakeholders to support the implementation of the strategy and provide feedback on strategy initiatives. The Network will report regularly to the Vice-Chancellor’s Committee on initiatives and ideas.

The USQ Health and Wellbeing Leadership Team will be established to assist with the development of initiatives to support USQ managers and leaders to further develop their awareness and initiatives to assist and identify health and wellbeing issues within USQ’s work and learning environments.
4. Actions, Timeframes and Predicted Outcomes

The USQ Health and Wellbeing Strategy 2016–2020 includes a number of Actions, Timeframes and Predicted Outcomes which specifically focus on:

1. establishing structures to support promotion and awareness, early response, and monitoring and prevention
2. developing, implementing and evaluating new and existing programs and initiatives
3. evaluating overall strategy outcomes.
