SYNOPSIS
Language is inextricable from the society in which it is used. This course provides students with a comprehensive coverage of the most relevant topics related to the interrelationship between language and society, as well as language and culture. It provides educators, applied linguists and language teachers with an understanding of the social aspects of language, including the most topical issues of language planning and policy, societal aspects of language use, attitudes towards social dialects and other language varieties. This course is useful not only for teachers and educators, but also for those who take advocacy in maintaining native and community languages, including language program managers at institutional as well as national levels.

OBJECTIVES
On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

- demonstrate an understanding of the scope of sociolinguistics and identify language related issues as part of the field;
- compare different language varieties, demonstrate an understanding of societal attitudes towards them and discuss their implications for education and the society as a whole;
- discuss the factors influencing the choice of different languages used as a means of communication in various contexts;
- discuss and describe the interrelationship between language and culture and how culture affects our everyday communication;
- demonstrate cross-cultural sensitivity and the ability to apply culturally sensitive and appropriate approaches in educational practices;
• compare the gender-specific characteristics of speech and develop a sensitivity to language related stereotypes;
• identify and describe factors that contribute to language death and demonstrate the ability to critically analyse and suggest ways of language revitalisation;
• suggest ways of reversing language shift and propose ways of promoting minority languages;
• discuss language policy documents of international significance;
• critically analyse language policies and language planning in the Australian context as well as in the learners’ own context and offer alternative solutions.
