RATIONALE
This course involves a study of the history of the development of both the Australian vocational education and training sector and the university sector, from their beginnings in the nineteenth century to the end of the period of the Keating government in 1995. The course aims to provide students with a sound understanding of why the sectors have developed as they have, with an emphasis on how policies have developed in response to changing circumstances in the social, political and economic climate of Australia over time. Understanding the past provides the basis for a deeper understanding of the current policy climate. The course also provides people working in the VET sector with a greater understanding of how the university sector operates - and why.

SYNOPSIS
In this course students will be encouraged to gain a sound overall understanding of issues and policy directions which have shaped the current development of Australian tertiary education. The course involves a study of key events in the development of tertiary education and an analysis of the current and emerging policies in the higher education and VET sectors.

OBJECTIVES
On successful completion of this course learners will be able to:

- understand how tertiary education has developed in Australia and demonstrate an appreciation of the major factors which have shaped this development;
- demonstrate an understanding of, and develop skills in, the analysis of educational policies in their historical context; and
- demonstrate knowledge of the policy, legislative and regulatory frameworks in which tertiary education is embedded.
