SYNOPSIS

This course examines cross-national management requirements that impact on all aspects of a firm's performance both within and across national and international boundaries. Globalisation's essential feature is that organisations manufacture, service, employ and market to populations with different laws, different beliefs and different levels of socio-economic development. International managers need to develop the competencies to analyse these differences and be able to formulate appropriate policies with respect to international operations such as staff management and the conduct of international expansion. The course is issue-based and analyses the similarities and differences in relation to particular management issues across countries that can be selected from China, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia, Japan, Indonesia, India, Phillipines, Thailand, New Zealand or Australia. The course allows students to apply some of their understanding of management and related disciplines by examining varying contexts in the management in different countries.

OBJECTIVES

On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

- identify significant issues involved in comparing management policies and practices in selected countries;
- understand the importance of the legal, cultural, socio-economic and political frameworks in international comparisons of management; and
- undertake comparative management analyses of selected countries.
