RATIONALE
As persons beginning their formal studies of education and training practices, learners in this course are required to analyse and apply various processes associated with instructional decision-making in relation to both the planning and implementation of face-to-face instruction. Learners also will be required to demonstrate their on-the-job competence on the planning, implementation and self-evaluation of selected instructional strategies.

SYNOPSIS
As an initial instructional theory and practice course, TEA2301 will introduce and develop instructional planning and decision making strategies, and basic instructional presentation skills. Through a series of `hands on' activities, students will then be required to begin to develop their individual instructional skills to plan and implement a series of instructional sessions within their instructional setting. At all times students will be encouraged to develop a commitment to self-evaluation as a major factor in their on-going development of an effective personal instructional style. Note: Students while enrolled in this course must be involved, at least part-time, as an instructor/trainer in post-compulsory or community education or industry training. Such involvement must enable the student to plan, implement and evaluate instructional sessions with groups of learners.
OBJECTIVES
On successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. identify and analyse the variables which help to shape the nature and effectiveness of their instructional situation and practice;
2. identify and analyse the range of decisions which they as teachers/trainers must make in establishing an effective learning environment;
3. demonstrate an ability to plan, justify, implement and evaluate teaching-learning sessions appropriate to the needs of learners in their particular instructional situation;
4. demonstrate, in actual instructional situations, the ability to successfully use a range of instructional methods and techniques to facilitate successful learning in face-to-face situations;
5. demonstrate the ability to evaluate the effectiveness of their instructional planning and implementation and to use outcomes of such self-evaluation in improving subsequent teaching-learning activities;
6. demonstrate through self-evaluation and improved instructional practices an on-going development of an effective personal instructional style given the instructional context in which they work.
