SYNOPSIS
One of the major contemporary issues facing virtually all organisations is the fast-changing and highly complex and dynamic environments they operate in - both externally and internally. There is a constant drive for organisational change - not only to survive but to be able to compete and be successful and sustainable. It is essential for managers and leaders to be familiar with and have competence in the area of change management and leadership. More than ever before, leaders, managers and professionals need to focus on the continuous renewal of their organisations on various fronts. They not only need to know how to go about leading and managing change for improved organisational performance and sustainability, but also be more sensitive to their own ability to change themselves. In this course students will be required to demonstrate their practical ability to take part in or evaluate some change management programs and interventions, in particular contexts.

OBJECTIVES
The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item/s that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective is/are shown in parentheses after each objective. On successful completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. demonstrate an understanding of the complex nature of change as well as those factors that affect and enhance prospects for planned organisational change (Assignment, Examination)
2. articulate a perspective on the contextual and conceptual foundations of organisational change (Assignment, Examination)
3. demonstrate an understanding of the processes and many of the strategies and techniques which can be applied to lead, manage and facilitate organisational change (Assignment, Examination)
4. demonstrate their ability to take part in or evaluate some change management programs and interventions, in different contexts (Assignment, Examination).
