RATIONALE
Regardless of the size and complexity of the organisation, Information Technology (IT) managers in the 21st century need to be architects of alignment, linking business and IT. IT strategy is concerned with more than technology: it involves integrating skills, processes, and structures to transform the organisation. In today’s hyper-competitive global markets the effectiveness of the links between IT and business are critically important. The reach of the IT into every aspect of an organisation's activities underscores the need to adequately prepare today's IT managers in terms of strategic, tactical and operational planning and management.

SYNOPSIS
This course recognises the importance of aligning IT with the strategic goals of the organisation. The management of IT and the strategic, tactical and operational IT processes are examined to consider how effective systems planning and management can contribute to the organisation. To address pertinent issues, this course includes the following topics: IT governance, IT structure, performance, measurement and reporting, management of emerging technologies, change management and project management. Verbal and written communication skills are also emphasised as important for the student's skill and knowledge portfolio.
OBJECTIVES
The course objectives define the student learning outcomes for a course. The assessment item/s that may be used to assess student achievement of an objective is/are shown in parentheses after each objective. On successful completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. use the strategic alignment model to harmonise the goals and implementation plans of IT with the goals and organisation structure of the business (Assignment, Examination)
2. understand the strategic, tactical and operational processes of an IT department within an organisation, in particular IT strategic planning and IT governance and the role of the CIO and IT management (Assignment, Examination)
3. consider the issues surrounding the management of emerging technologies and the impact of technical and organisational change arising from IT applications (Assignment, Examination)
4. examine various business structural options for IT service provision and HR issues related to the IT function (Assignment, Examination)
5. develop effective IT-business communication, and understand how to measure IT performance and benefits (Assignment, Examination)
6. understand how the nine project management body of knowledge (PMBOK) areas and five process groups apply to IT projects (Assignment, Examination).
