REQUISITES

SYNOPSIS
This course is designed to enable students to evaluate the role of key conceptual frameworks that underpin the organisational structures and communication practices of organisations. The course reviews a range of influential approaches to organisational communication including: traditional Classical and Scientific approaches; Human Relations approaches; Eastern based Philosophical approaches; along with Neo-Classical Economic and Free Market Economy approaches. Students in this course will critically analyse and evaluate factors of influence stemming from these approaches in shaping functional organisational cultures and effective communication and information distribution through organisations at a range of key points including communication between: individuals; within and between work teams; across organisational networks and the role and practices of management.

OBJECTIVES
On completion of this course students will be able to:

1. understand the application of communication theory to organisational communication (Assessment item 1 refers)
2. have developed perspectives on the transition from traditional social science approaches concerning organisational communication to the emergence of naturalistic, interpretive scholarship in the field (Assessment item 1 refers)
3. understand the standard theories of organisation and organisational effectiveness as well as traditional scholarship or communication structure and function, superior-subordinate relationships and group decision making (Assessment items 1 and 2 refer)
4. be able to discuss organisational communication themes from the perspective of structural-functionalism, a contemporary model in the contemporary functionalist view of organisational culture (Assessment items 1 and 2 refer)
5. be able to evaluate communication theory in its application to the functioning of organisations (Assessment items 1 and 2 refer)
